ULTRAMARINES DREADNOUGHT

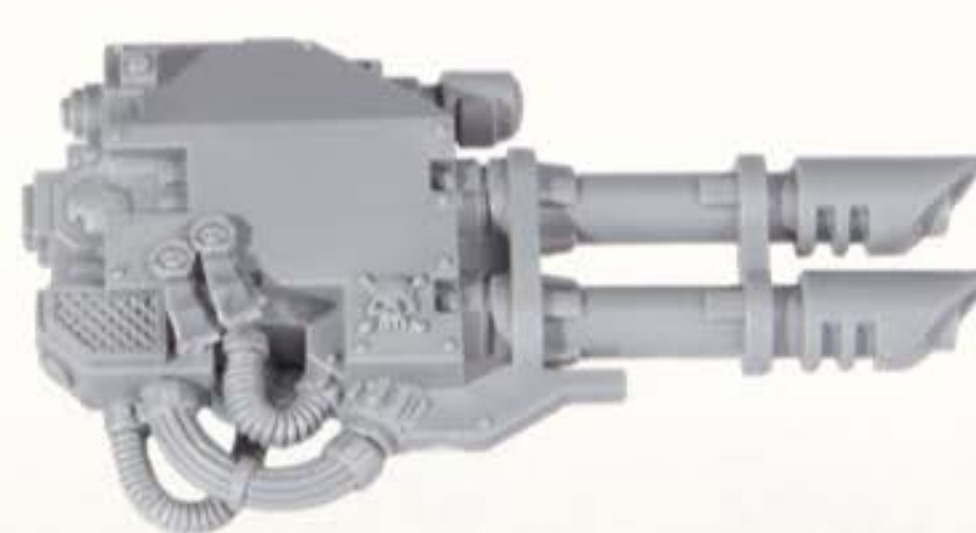

HOW TO PAINT SUB-ASSEMBLIES

Duncan always assembles his Dreadnoughts in stages, as shown here, so that he can basecoat, wash and drybrush the main areas of the model without fear of overlapping his earlier paintwork.

As he works on the whole model at once, moving between metallic and non-metallic areas freely, he keeps two pots of water handy, so as not to get metallic flakes on his nice blue armour!

Finally, you'll notice that Duncan sticks adhesive putty to the joints of the model, so that when he comes to stick the whole thing together he can work on the pose before he glues the Dreadnought together.

HOW TO PAINT CITADEL MINIATURES: SPACE MARINES

ULTRAMARINES STORMTALON GUNSHIP

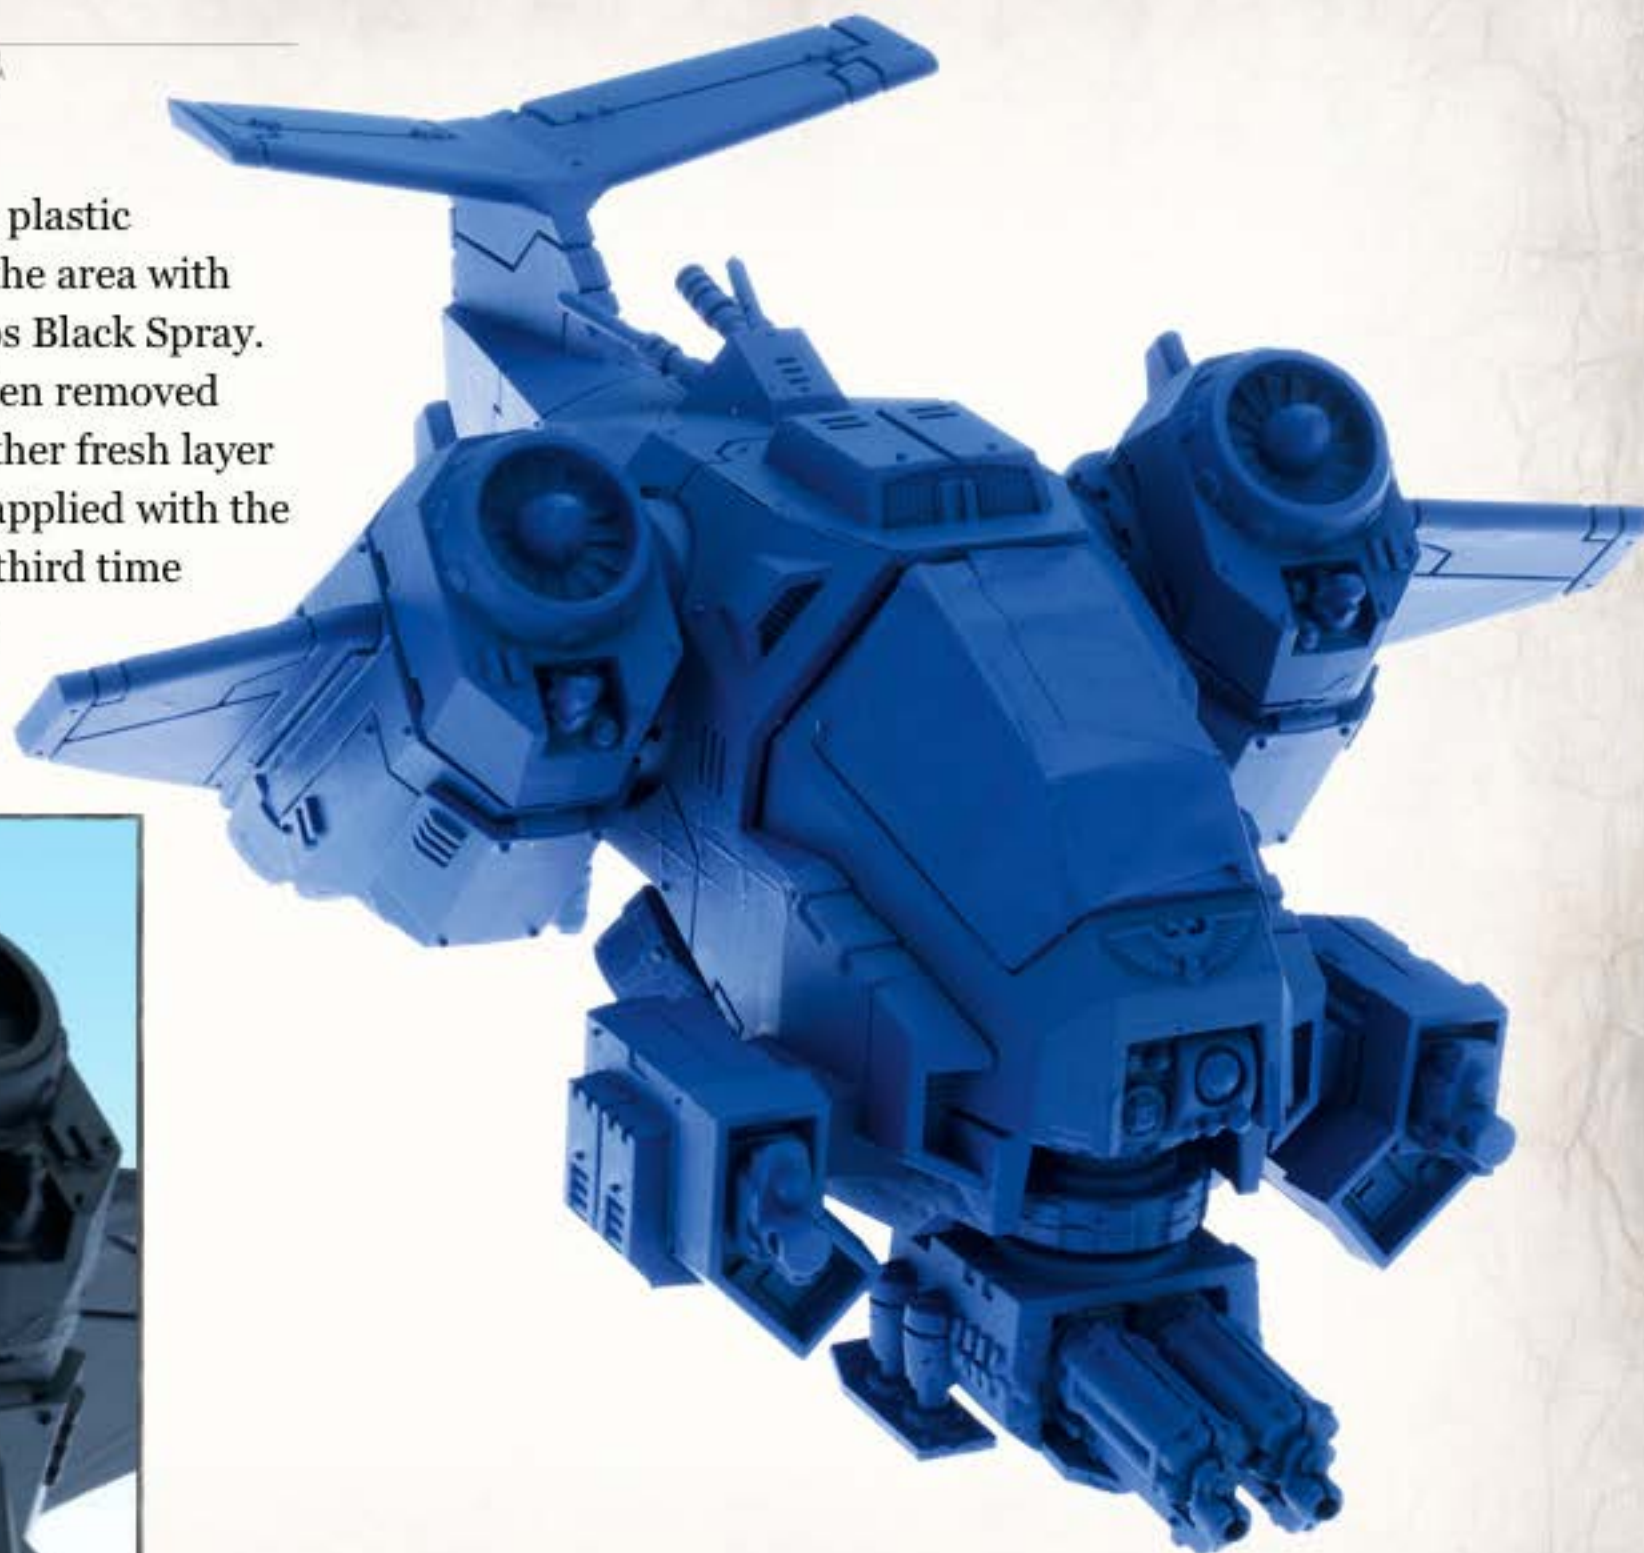

HOW TO PAINT

PREPARATION

In order to avoid getting any paint on the clear plastic screens of the canopy, Chad carefully covered the area with masking tape before undercoating it with Chaos Black Spray. To avoid any potential contamination, Chad then removed this layer of masking tape before applying another fresh layer in preparation for his first basecoat, which he applied with the Citadel Spray Gun. He repeated this process a third time before applying his first layer paint, also using the Citadel Spray Gun.

Chad lightly drybrushed the engines with Abaddon Black to achieve a suitably scorched effect.

The cockpit frame was carefully painted in the same colours as the armour panels using a Detail Brush.

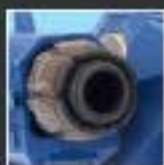

Chad weathered the leading edges with a Detail Brush using the same colours used for the metal.

The red of the Techmarine pilot was painted using the same process as the one used for the Veteran Sergeant's red helmet in the Vanguard Veteran section.

The final touch was to add some Chapter icons from the transfer sheet included with the kit.
