HOW TO PAINT CITADEL MINIATURES:

LIZARDMEN

SECTION 1

USING THIS GUIDE

On the following pages, you will find a step-by-step guide to painting the Citadel miniatures showcased in this article. In each case, you will see a quick reference guide to painting the featured model. While these guides make a great starting point, you will find far more detailed information on the Citadel paints, tools and techniques featured here in How To Paint Citadel Miniatures. For best results, we heartily recommend that you keep your copy near to hand while following these guides.

To one side of every page that showcases a model's paint scheme, you will see our quick reference guide. This is laid out in numbered steps and gives you the basic information required to paint your models so that they match those shown.

The top part of each step of the reference guide points out the Citadel paint, wash or glaze in use, while the bottom refers to the specific type of Citadel paintbrush that is being utilised. The small band of colour on the left of the brush name is colour-coded to match the ends of the brushes in your Citadel brush collection, making it even easier to pick the correct tool.

CHAPTER 2

Undercoating

PREPARING

UNDERCOATING MINIATURES

Before you begin painting your Citadel miniatures, you will want to prime them. This process, known as undercoating, provides a smooth, even surface for you to paint onto.

Easily the fastest and most effective way to undercoat your models is to use a spray undercoat. Citadel Chaos Black Spray and Skull White Spray are formulated to give you an excellent finish that your Citadel Base paints will adhere to effortlessly.

SPRAY UNDERCOAT

Chaos Black Spray and Skull White Spray are quick to use, especially across large numbers of models, and they enable you to get great results in next to no time. With that said, however, you will need access to a well-ventilated area (usually outside) to spray your models, for obvious health and safety reasons. Using spray undercoat can also be rather messy (as you might expect) so it's worth setting up a spot to work – spraying into a cardboard box or similar can be a very good idea, for example.

UNDERCOATING BY HAND

There are times when using a spray undercoat might not be convenient. Undercoating by hand is a worthy alternative – hobbyists have been doing it for years! Imperial Primer is specially designed for undercoating by hand. Water it down (just a little) and paint it onto your models using a Wash Brush.

BLACK &amp; WHITE

The Citadel range contains Chaos Black Spray and Skull White Spray. While most paint jobs will benefit from a Chaos Black undercoat, there are times when either could be useful. Chaos Black lends itself brilliantly to darker colours, it's well suited to large areas of armour, and it gives natural shading to recesses. Skull White, on the other hand, is great for lighter, brighter colours as you will see later on.

SPRAY AREA

Something to consider, as you prepare to spray your models, is your working area. Unless you are lucky enough to have a spray booth complete with extractor fan, you'll want to work outside – make sure you're not going to ruin walls, picnic tables or wheelie bins with errant spraying. A carefully placed newspaper or a box with the top cut off can make a suitable starting point as shown to the right.

BOXES

Many hobbyists utilise a spray box – a large cardboard box with a side removed. This helps to contain all the paint that you're firing at your models, preventing awkward explanations to parents or partners about why you have painted the picnic table or patio. It can also provide a little shelter from the wind on a blustery day if you're spraying in the garden.

PREPARING

Chaos Black and Skull White Sprays are aerosol sprays. When stored properly and used according to the directions, they will give you an excellent undercoat, the perfect canvass to paint onto.

GETTING IT RIGHT

Firstly, you need to shake your can sufficiently to make sure the primer is ready. Shake the can vigorously for a minute or so, and make sure to shake it frequently during use. To spray your models, hold the can upright and about 20cm/8" from your target, then spray across the miniature in short bursts. Do not touch the models until the undercoat is dry (approximately 15 minutes). Your miniatures will be ready to paint after about an hour.

TRICKS OF THE TRADE

Having a properly prepared space to undercoat your models can make your finished results better, as well as keeping things neat and tidy and, most importantly of all, keeping you safe from the fumes that using spray undercoat generates. This page contains some of the tips and tricks that we have learned over the years to help make undercoating more effective.

PICKING YOUR BATTLE

Because you must always use your Citadel Spray undercoat in a suitably ventilated environment, this often forces us hobbyists outside. So, you will need to consider factors such as temperature and humidity. If it is too hot, the paint might dry before it can settle on the model, if it's too cold, it can leave a powdery, chalky finish. Nice, dry evenings are often the best time to do your undercoating.

SPRAY STICK

A simple off-cut of wood or cardboard with a strip of double-sided sticky-tape can help you get spray onto those hard-to-reach places. Around here, we call these 'spray sticks' – all you will need is a length of wood that is long enough for your models (with a little left over to hold it by). Then, with the models securely taped into place, you can move the stick around and spray into the recesses, turning the stick to get the best angle (perfect for ensuring that your spray doesn't coat only the tops of your models).

ANGLES

Move the models, not the can! Your spray will give the best performance if it is held upright. Placing your models on a surface that can be turned and rotated helps – but make sure they are firmly stuck down, whether with adhesive putty or sticky tape, the choice is yours.

SPRAY PAINT TROUBLESHOOTING

When spraying your models, there is always a chance you will come across minor problems. If you follow the instructions from the previous few pages, you should be fine, but here are some troubleshooting tips to help you out.

UNEVEN COVERAGE

If you find areas of your miniatures that are not properly undercoated, you need to adjust the technique you are using. Take a look at the advice offered on the previous page about using a 'spray stick'. This way you can rotate the stick to get optimum angles, a couple of bursts at the right direction should cover up the parts that are missing paint nicely. Remember though – don't try to get at these by tilting your can, since that will alter the flow of paint and propellant. Hold the models at a different angle instead.

SPOTTY FINISH

A spotty finish is usually a symptom of a can that hasn't been sufficiently shaken prior to use. Thankfully, this is also very easily solved by making sure you always shake your can very thoroughly directly before using it. Also, as you are spraying your models, make sure you regularly shake the can between bursts.

Finally, always keep the can upright, to ensure that you are spraying the correct proportions of paint and propellant. If the can is tilted, there is a strong chance that too much propellant will come out in comparison to paint, so hold it as upright as possible.

RIPPLED SURFACE

A rippled surface on a miniature is a clear indication that you are spraying too close to your model. Avoid this by holding the can the recommended distance from the model and by spraying in short bursts only. It is fair to say that several light coats of paint are far more effective (and kinder on your miniatures) than one thick one – spraying too close is how you lose detail.

If you have a model that has been coated like this, you could try placing it somewhere warm (not hot) to dry and leaving it for a while. If the paint has a chance to dry slowly the paint may set in a way that doesn't obscure the detail.

SURFACE IS GRAINY

The major cause of this side-effect is spraying models when it is too warm. When it's really hot, paint can partially dry before it reaches the model, creating this undesired effect. Unfortunately, there is precious little that we can do to change the weather where we are, so if you are struggling with a grainy texture to your spray undercoat, you might just have to wait until it isn't as hot or revert to undercoating by hand indoors, where it is cooler.

There are a couple of ways to prevent the paint drying so fast, such as waiting until the evening, when the temperatures have fallen or spraying your models out of direct sunlight.

i TOP TIP

Thinning down Kantor Blue with Lahmian Medium allows the paint to settle in the recesses between the scales, providing natural shading. It also allows the lighter basecoat colour to shine through on the edges of the scales where the paint is thinnest, giving a natural highlight. This is a great technique when painting large numbers of models at the same time.

SALAMANDERS

Carroburg Crimson is 'pooled' onto the individual scales several times. This is where a drop of the paint is carefully dabbed on each scale so that it darkens the centre area whilst leaving the edge a lighter colour. This gives the scales a pigmentation which is reminiscent of solidifying lava!
